The Art of the Baroque Violin and Harpsichord:

An introductory tour of the rich and varied repertoire for this combination of instruments from across Europe, touching on the great cultural centres of Rome, Venice, Paris, London and Leipzig from the early 17th to the late 18th centuries. The programme includes music by J S Bach, Vivaldi, Handel, Corelli and Leclair

Bach and Sons:

J S Bach pioneered the sonata for violin and harpsichord in the 1730s with a set of six distinguished pieces which were amongst his own favourite compositions. Two of his sons, Carl Philipp Emmanuel and Johann Christian, continued to develop this genre in respectively Berlin and London, the former influencing Haydn and Beethoven, the latter influencing the young Mozart. This concert explores the contrasting musical styles of this exceptional family of musicians.

Music for the House of Hanover:

The accession to the British throne of the German-born George I in 1714 ushered in an unprecedented period for London as a cosmopolitan and international centre of European culture. This concert includes music by composers closely associated with four generations of Hanoverians, including Handel, Geminiani, Johann Christian Bach and Abel, and traces the changing musical tastes of London through the early and middle years of the 18th century.

Entertainments for the Ancien Régime:

The century preceding the fall of the French Ancien Régime in 1789 produced some of the most refined chamber music ever. The composers were involved in both the grand formality of the court at Versailles and the sprawling bustle of Paris and their music reflects both the intensely profound and elegantly charming. This programme includes music by Leclair, Mondonville, Duphy and one of the few women to achieve distinction in composition, Elisabeth Jacquet de la Guerre.
